Moreover, the court noted that Congress had specifically responded to the concerns of the plaintiffs' counsel by allowing wholesale transfer of partial payments from the plaintiffs' trust accounts to satisfy the judgments against them by providing that the IITA funds were to be "paid to the Department of Justice to be applied by the Attorney General to the costs, expenses or obligations for which the Secretary has provided funds under this chapter." Id. at 1171 (citing 7 U.S.C. § 1446a(d)(2)(A) (1982)). In addition, the court noted that "Congress was aware when it enacted the 1982 amendments to the Food Stamp Act that it could be in effect for more than eighteen months and that there would be little incentive for debtors to settle their debts with the IITA quickly."
